MRS. STRANG RELEASED ON BONDS

Approved by Magistrate Taylor Monday Evening and Leaves for Home

PROMINENT MEN SIGN IT

Mrs. Grace Ives Strang, whose release under a $25,000 was consented to by state's attorney Welch late Monday and whose bond was later approved by Magistrate Walter Taylor walked away from the Lake county jail at seven o'clock Monday evening, the bond having been filled out by signers whose total property valuation was many times the amount of the bond.

Mrs. Strang immediately went to her home in Highland Park where she is now resting up after her experiences of the past few weeks spent in jail pending action on the charge made against her by the state that she murdered her husband by giving her strychnine.

Mrs. Strang went to Highland Park with her two brothers who had been working so hard for her release even if but for the summer under bonds. The children were not at the jail to meet their mother but they were anxiously awaiting her at their home.

Mrs. Strang plans remaining in Highland Park for the time being with her four children. It is admitted she may take a trip some place to get away from the association which the past few weeks have produced.

The signers of the big bond, one of the largest ever submitted to the Lake county courts, included some of the best known men in Highland Park and Deerfield township.

A Chicago newspaper photographer tried his best all the way from Magistrate Taylor's office to the county jail to get a snapshot of Mrs. Strang and several times only interference of counsel, Mr. Dady and others prevented Will Ives, brother of Mrs. Strang, from smashing the camera man's equipment. It is said the photographer was unsuccessful in his attempts.

The signers of the bond were: Grace I. Strang, Charles A. Ives, Wm. G. Ives, brothers; E. A. Warren, Anthony Laenciani, John Udell, Julius H. Zimmers, Fritz Bahr, Jesse Soby, R. L. Bullock, Theo. S. Knapp, E. L. Terry, E. H. Williams, R. E. Moore, C. E. Thompson.

It is stated that the bondmen mentioned represent in their total property valuations of much over $100,000.

Stolen Auto's Trail Leads to Fox Lake

The trail of a stolen automobile led Captain Wesley Westbrook of the Austin station and a squad of detectives Monday to Fox Lake, where the car was recovered and four men were placed under arrest. A fifth member of the band was arrested before in Chicago.

Robert A. Lackey, Oak Park, vice president of the Payson Manufacturing company, was on his way home Friday when three young men asked for a ride, entered his car, threw him out and drove away.

Next day a person who refused to give his name telephoned to Mr. Lackey saying that he had seen the robbery and that one of the men was Harry R. Clarke, Oak Park.

Clarke was arrested and said the car had been driven to Fox Lake. Captain Westbrook went to the lake and recovered the car, arresting Carl Knabe, Louis Larson and two other men whose names he refused to reveal.

First Daily Paper.

"March 11th was the anniversary of the birth of the first daily paper in England, to wit, the Daily Courant," says the London Morning Post. "It was issued in the year 1702, by 'B. Mallet, against the Ditch in Fleet Street,' and it was cynically said of the worthy pioneer that he was the earliest journalist to show any jealousy for an accurate statement of fact."

Paddock-Forster Wedding at St. Peter's Church

Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock at St. Peter's church in this village occurred the wedding of Miss Mary E. Paddock of Grass Lake and Mr. Erving A. Forster of Chicago.

The church was very prettily decorated for the occasion and the ceremony was performed by Father Joseph Savage, cousin of the bride.

The music for the occasion was furnished by the church choir of Willmot, with Arthur Buckley as soloist.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin with an overdress of tulle and carried a prayer book. She was attended by Miss Loretta Gillen of Chicago as Maid of Honor, who wore a gown of pink and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Miss Lillian Forster of Chicago, sister of the groom, and Miss Belle Hughes of Antioch served as bridesmaids, the former being attired in lavender and carried a bouquet of lavender sweet peas, while the latter wore a dress of pale green and carried a bouquet of roses and daisies. The rainbow effect being carried out in minute detail.

The groom wore the conventional black and was attended by his brother A. W. Forster of Norfolk, Va., as best man. Walter Forbick of Grass Lake and Ernest Hartman of Chicago served as ushers.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at Johnson's Bluff Lake resort followed by a reception at the home of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Forster left on the evening train for an extended honeymoon trip through the east. Upon their return they will reside in Chicago. The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Paddock of Grass Lake, and is one of the most popular young ladies of the vicinity. Her friends are numbered by the score and all unite in wishing the happy couple a most pleasant voyage on the matrimonial sea.

The groom, who is not widely acquainted here, is a young man of exemplary character and stands high in his profession, which is that of pharmacist.

Many friends and relatives from Chicago were in attendance as well as a large number from this vicinity.

Construct Vault for Remains of Robert Hook

John Sutherland of Waukegan is constructing a crypt in the Fox Lake cemetery for the remains of Robert Hook. Before Mr. Hook died he told Mr. Sutherland he wanted a vault made from field stone taken from the farm at Monaville, where Mr. Hook was born. Mr. Sutherland is carrying out the wishes of Mr. Hook. The field stones are being used for walls and the walls will have a concrete roof and be lined with steel. When the vault is completed the remains of Mr. Hook will be transferred to it from Oakland cemetery.

Milk Producers Trial Put Over

Hot weather and judges and lawyers maneuvering to get away on their vacations caused the trial of the eight officials of the Milk Producers' association, indicted for conspiring to arbitrarily fix milk prices, to be continued to September. Judge Joseph H. Fitch, trial judge in Chicago who has agreed to hear the case, said it wouldn't be fair to keep a jury locked up for the summer months. Former Governor Deneen and Assistant State's Attorneys Bell, Michels and Walker agreed to the postponement.

Dainty Early Flowers.

There is to me a daintiness about early flowers that touches me like poetry. They blow out with such a simple loveliness among the common herbs of pastures, and breathe their lives so unobtrusively, like hearts whose beatings are too gentle for the world.—Willis.

REVIEW OF THE WORLD'S DAIRY INDUSTRY

Commissions Appointed Endeavoring to Arrive at True Status of Industry

DAIRYMEN MUST PROGRESS

The world's dairy industry is receiving, at the present time, more serious investigation and consideration than ever before in the world's history.

Commissions appointed by our Government and by corporate dairy interests are endeavoring to arrive at the true status of the industry in the old world, while commissions appointed by old world governments are making a very careful survey of their home conditions and the available supply of foreign dairy cattle and products. Some of these Commissions are represented in this country now.

In order, therefore, that all dairy research of the period might have some concentrating point, invitations have been issued, and prospectuses sent by our government to all foreign governments through the American Consular Service, covering the National Dairy Show and the replies received indicate a very keen interest, as noted by some half dozen acceptances of this invitation that have been received from foreign powers, in which it is stated that delegates or commissions will represent them at the show this fall.

So far as our cattle interests are concerned, our home demands possibly afford the best market for good cattle that there is available today, and we should take advantage of the necessary re-adjustment of the world's dairy supplies going on, to put ourselves in shape through a war to the hilt on the scrub at home, and the building up of our herds that will make us invincible when it comes to taking care of the world's needs of dairy products.

However, in point of invention and character of manufacture, a visit by any government commission will undoubtedly discover many things in the dairy machinery and equipment line that will be new to them, and highly important to their progress.

This makes of the dates—October 6th to 12th, 1919, dates of far reaching and vast importance to our National Dairy Industry, and any man associated with the industry who does not prepare to participate in the great events of that week at the National Dairy Show, is not seeking to keep up with the procession of progress in his industry.

The Department of our government most at interest, and the National Dairy Association ask and urge the kindest and heartiest co-operation of all officials of dairy associations in spreading the gospel of this year's National Dairy Show programme.

Two Girls Have Narrow Escape from Drowning

Mabel Stickels and Augusta Hucker had a narrow escape from drowning while bathing in Loon Lake last Tuesday afternoon. Before they realized what they were doing they had ventured out too far and being unable to swim well they went down. As they came up they called for help but those about thought their cries were only a joke, and calmly watched them sink once more. Suddenly, Gladys Stickles, who is a good swimmer saw the situation was serious and immediately set out to render assistance, reaching them none too soon. As they were about to go down the third time she grabbed them and soon had them back to shore. A little later they were brought home. Beyond a bad fright they were uninjured, and are now thanking their lucky stars that Gladys had learned the art of swimming.

Power Pays.

It is said that a sewing machine with an individual motor averages 1,000 stitches a minute, while the old foot-driven machine accomplishes only 300 or 400 stitches a minute at most.

Calls on Girl; Is Taken By Sheriff Green

When Edward Croener, alias Edward Wotski; aged 18, called upon his sweetheart Tuesday night he made a serious mistake, as he now occupies a call in the county jail in Waukegan, charged with the theft on $700 worth of Liberty bonds, certificates of deposit and cash.

Croener had been employed for about a week on the Dering farm, on the Antioch-Fox Lake road. He disappeared and likewise two certificates for $400 and $185 in money belonging to an employee named Davis Coons, and a $50 Liberty bond and $40 in cash belonging to another workman.

It is charged Croener cashed one bond in Chicago, receiving $47, and that he had in his room on Milwaukee avenue, a stolen revolver and a suitcase. He had two rooming places in Chicago.

Traces of Croener were obtained through letters he received from his sweetheart at 2234 Hamburg street, Irving Park, Chicago. Sheriff Elmer Green and two aids planted themselves at the girl's home while an other officer took her out for a walk. Meantime Croener went to the girl's home and was arrested by the officers.

He is declared to have spent a lot of money buying jewelry for the girl and clothes for himself.

Croener at the hearing before Police Magistrate Taylor waived a hearing and was bond over to the grand jury on $3,000 bonds.

Chas. Dowst Provides Emergency Hospital

Charles Dowst, who died a couple of weeks ago in Evanston and who was a Waukegan product yet who had dissociated himself from Waukegan for a greater part of his business career, has done the big thing for Waukegan. His will, filed before Judge Devine in Chicago shows that Mr. Dowst, almost a stranger in Waukegan, has done the biggest thing ever done for Waukegan. Summarizing, here is what he did: He left the old Dowst home, southwest corner Utica and Madison street, and the balance of his estate after the death of his sister, Mrs. Henry Green, to the city of Waukegan to be used for an emergency hospital to be known as The Jane Dowst Emergency Hospital, in memory of his mother, a pioneer of Waukegan.

As Mr. Dowst was head of the big publishing firm of Dowst brothers, publishers of the National Laundry Journal it means that Waukegan is to receive the biggest gift within its history.

It is variously estimated that Mr. Dowst left a fortune of upwards of $200,000.

The will provides that the emergency hospital shall be governed by the city council of Waukegan.

$10,000 In Prizes for Grains

The Chicago board of trade, desiring to stimulate and improve grain and forage production, offers $10,000 in premiums to exhibitors of grains and hay at the International Live Stock exposition of Chicago, during the first week in December.

The management of this exposition promises to stage a show of grains and forage which will in all respects be on a par with the wonderful exhibits of live stock annually assembled at this, "The World's Greatest Live Stock Show."

By having these powerful influences co-operate, an exhibition of grains and forage may be looked for, the equal of which has never been seen anywhere.

Why We Are Late

On account of an accident with the newspaper press and the consequent difficulties which it involved, we were unable to print on Thursday afternoon as usual. This week's issue is late in reaching our readers, but the delay was unavoidable and as our difficulties are now overcome we hope to be on time in the future.

Roads Must Be Kept In Repair.

Investment of money in new roads does not become real economy until provision is made for keeping these new roads in condition after they are built. If a new road is built and then allowed to fall into disrepair, much of the original investment is simply wasted.

Curious Plant.

Among the curiosities of the desert of Sahara is a queer-looking scrubby plant, always yellow with fine sand, called the "coughing bean." In the long dry heat its pores become choked and it would die were it not for a powerful gas which accumulates inside and explodes with a sound like a human cough.

Death Claims Recent Resident Saturday

Last Saturday morning at the home of her son, Mr. J. Mann, east of town occurred the death of Mrs. L. J. Smith. The deceased who was 83 years and 4 months of age was a native of the east, having been born and reared in Pennsylvania. Fourteen years ago she entered the family of her son, and when they came to Antioch to reside last March, she came as one of the household. Soon after their arrival here she suffered a stroke of paralysis and has been confined to her bed every since.

The funeral services were held at the home Monday afternoon and the remains were laid at rest in the Antioch Hillside cemetery.

At the End—Youth.

If I had created men and women, I should have framed them on a type widely different from that which has actually prevailed—that of the higher mammals. I should have made men and women, not to resemble the great apes as they do, but on the models of insects which, after a life as caterpillars, change into butterflies, and for the brief final term of their existence have no thought but to love and be lovely. I should have set youth at the end of the human span.—From "The Garden of Epicurus" by Anatole France.

Postal Rates Will Drop on July First

Postmaster Frank B. Huber has received a notice from the Postmaster General which official fixes the re-adoption of pre-war postal rates to take effect on July 1. From the first of the coming month on, the rates on all first class mail will drop from three to two cents an ounce. Drop letters as well as those going out of the city will be two cents while postal cards will be one cent.

The notice from the postal headquarters also states that those persons owning three cent stamped envelopes or two cent stamped cards will have the privilege of returning them to the postoffice and getting them exchanged for two cent envelopes and one cent post cards. No money will be refunded on stamps but stamps of smaller denominations will be given in exchange. The exchange of stamps will be closed after August 1st. All persons wishing to exchange their stamps or envelopes will have the privilege only between July 1 and August 1.

Due to the falling off in mail and the huge increase in the cost of handling mailed material, the Government found it imperative to raise the rates on first class mail matter. With the end of the war however foreign mail has increased and sufficient help is again available to handle all of the mailed matter. The law which was passed ordering the raise in mail rates provided also that the rates should be dropped to normal six months after the termination of hostilities. As the armistice was signed early in November and peace is now assured the rates have been ordered to their pre-war basis again.

Lightning Kills Husband on Honeymoon

A honeymoon trip came to a tragic ending at Camp Lake, Monday, when John Redpath, 33 years old, of Chicago, was struck by lightning while fishing in an open boat at Camp Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Redpath went to the resort on a honeymoon trip and were fishing in separate boats. The wife returned to shore at the approach of the storm and saw her husband fall in the boat.

She called assistance, but Redpath was dead when he was reached by the hotel men. A jagged mark burned the length of his body showed he had been killed instantly. The body was taken to Chicago for burial.

"That makes no difference," Daphne stormed, already converted to the shop religion. "Customers must not find the door shut. Run open it at once. Suppose Mrs. Romilly dropped in. We'd lose her—unless this notoriety drives her away." A little blush of shame flickered in Daphne's pale cheeks a moment and went out. She sighed: "I suppose Mr. Duane has stopped that check, too—if he ever sent it. Oh, dear!"

Then a nurse knocked; brought in a card growing in a large little azalea tree. Daphne scanned it. "Mr. Thomas Varick Duane." She peered closer at the pencillings and read aloud: "I just learned. I'm heart-broken. Isn't there anything I can do?"

Daphne felt as if outraged society had forgiven her.

"Isn't he a darling?" she murmured. Mrs. Chivvis begrudged a stingy, "Well, of course—" She had the poor folks' conscientious scruples against wasting praise on the rich. "You'll want to see him, I presume."

But Daphne had had enough of evil appearance. "See him here? Never!" She glared at poor Mrs. Chivvis with a reproach that was excruciating to accept, and ordered her to go down and meet Mr. Duane and incidentally learn about the check. "Business is business," she said.

Mrs. Chivvis descended in all the confusion of a Puritan wife meeting a Cavalier beau. She came back later to say that Mr. Duane was really very nice, and spoke beautifully and had sent the check and would send another if Daphne wished it, and would make old Mrs. Romilly go on with the order, and would she like some special fruits or soups or something? He was really very nice.

Daphne eyed her with ironic horror and said, "You've been flirting with him! and me so helpless here!"

"Daphne!—neither Kip!" Mrs. Chivvis screamed. The only counter-thrust she could think of was, "And what does Mr. Wimburn say?"

This sobered Daphne. Why had Clay sent no word? Everybody in town had seen the papers. Clay read the papers. Surely he was not capable of such monstrous pique. When your worst enemy gets badly hurt you've just got to forgive—if you're human.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Lella was determined to endure everything that might be necessary to regain her beauty. She would go through any ordeal of knives or plaster casts or splints or medicines for that. She was quite grim about it. Her resolution extended to the spending of as much of Bayard's money as might be necessary on surgeons' fees and doctors' bills. If she bankrupted Bayard it would be with the tenderest motives.

Five times she went to the operating table, made that infernal journey into etherland, knowing what afterwards awaited her, what retching and burning and bleeding. She braved death again and again, took long chances with covering bravado. And all for Bayard's sake.

One morning when Bayard reached his office after a harrowing all-night vigil at Lella's side he was just falling asleep over the first mail when his telephone snarled. He reached for it with alarm. A voice boomed in his ear:

"Ah you thah?"

"Yes."

"Keep the line, please. Now, you ah through, sir?"

Then a growl replaced the boom, a growl that made the receiver rattle: "Ah you thah, Mr. Kip? This is Colonel Marchmont. I dare say you remember our conversation about those damned contracts with Wetherell. A little farther discussion might not be amiss—if you could make it perfectly convenient to drop ovah at, say, a quavtah pahst fah?—Good! I shall expect you at that ah."

Bayard pondered. What new persecution was fate preparing? As he went to the office, he bought an evening paper. A heavily headed cablegram announced that the laborers in the British munition works were striking or threatening to strike. A gleam of understanding came into Bayard's eye. When he reached the desk of Colonel Marchmont he looked unabashed into the revolver muzzle of the old war horse's one eye.

Without any preliminary courtesies or any softening of his previous tone the colonel snorted: "Those devilish contracts you made with Wetherell!—The poor fellow is no longer alive—more's the pity, but—Well, I'm afraid I was a bit severe with you. I fancy we might see our way to renewing those contracts at a reasonable figure—say at a 25 per cent reduction from the terms you quoted."

Bayard smiled and shook his head. He bluffed the bluffer. "The prices we quoted included only a fair profit, colonel. Since then materials have been going up in price every minute, owing to the demand from abroad.

And the home market is booming. We can sell all our product here, and more, too, than we can make."

Colonel Marchmont squirmed, but he was a soldier and loved a good counter-attack. He smiled as he squirmed. Wetherell was avenged when his successor signed new contracts at a higher price than he had made. The changing times changed everything; yesterday's exorbitance was today's bargain.

Bayard departed with a wallet full of business. He got back to his office on feet flegged with Mercurial wings. His feet were beautiful on the rug of the president's office.

Bayard felt so kindly to all the world that he hurried to the hospital

Wetherell Was Avenged When His Successor Signed New Contracts at a Higher Price Than He Had Made.

to scatter good news like flowers over Lella's couch. She was in that humor when anybody else's good fortune was an added grief to her.

"I'm no use to you now," she wailed. "I never was much. But at least I dressed and kept looking fit. And you said I was pretty. But now—Oh, Bayard, Bayard! You used to call me beautiful, and I tried to be beautiful for you. But now—To be ugly and useless both—it's too much!"

Wise pathfinders say that when you are wandering in strange country you should turn every now and then and look back at the way you came. It wears a different aspect entirely from its look as you approached, and you will need to know how it will look when you return.

From childhood on, Lella had been warned against extravagance—as Bayard had, as have we all. But only now that she was looking backward could she realize the wisdom, the intolerable truth of the adage, "Waste not, want not."

Meanwhile Daphne was having so different a history that she felt ashamed. It seemed unfair to her to get well quickly and with no blemish except a scar or two that would not show, while Lella hung between death and deformity.

But seeing Bayard alone and hearing Lella fret, she felt confirmed in her belief that she had done the whole-some thing when she joined the laboring classes. There were discouragements without cease, yet Daphne was learning what a remedy for how many troubles there is in work. It seemed to be almost panacea. It was exciting, fatiguing, alarming, but it was objective. She was on her way at last to that fifty thousand a year she had dreamed of. She was uncertain yet of earning a thousand a year, but she was on the road.

Clay Wimburn, seeking chances in the West, did not see the New York papers or any other record of Daphne's accident. When he got back to New York, his pockets full of contracts, Bayard equally successful, greeted him enthusiastically. Then he learned of the accident and the fact that Daphne was "in trade." He was indignant at the news and wanted to see her at once.

Bayard gave him the address, and Clay wasted no time asking further questions. He made haste to the subway, fuming; left the train at the Grand Central station and climbed up to a taxicab.

Then he found Daphne.

She led him into a little shop empty of everything but the debris of removal.

"Where are we?" said Clay.

"This was my shop."

"What's the matter? Busted already?" Clay asked, with a not unflattering cheerfulness.

"Not in the least," Daphne explained. "We've expanded so fast we had to move. We sublet and moved across the street."

"You remember Mrs. Chivvis, don't you? Mrs. Chivvis, you haven't gotten Mr. Wimburn. He's kept away so long you might have, though. Where've you been, Clay? But wait—you can tell me on the way over to the new shop."

When she led him into her new emporium the graceful fabrics displayed were all red rags to him. He was a bull in a crimson shop.

Daphne made Clay sit down and asked him if it were not all perfectly lovely. He waited until Mrs. Chivvis went on to the workroom. He had a glimpse of a number of girls and women on sewing bent. They were laughing and chattering.

He answered, "It's perfectly loathsome."

Instead of resenting this insult Daphne laughed till she fell against the counter. The worst of it was that her eyes were so tender.

"Where did you get all the capital for all this stock?" Clay demanded, with sudden suspicion.

"Oh, part of it we bought on credit and part of it on borrowed money."

"Borrowed from whom?"

"From Mr. Duane."

This was too much of too much. Clay stormed: "I'll get him!"

"Oh, no, you won't!"

"Oh, yes, I will!"

"I won't have you assaulting the best friend I've got in the world."

He groaned aloud at this, not noticing how she used the word "friend."

She ran on. She had not talked to him for so long that she was a perfect chatterbox.

"He lent me five hundred dollars when I didn't know where else to get it. And it nipped our first real contract—a big commission from old Mrs. Romilly. We paid back Mr. Duane's five hundred and then—" She giggled in advance at what was coming to Clay. "And then I borrowed a thousand from him. We owe him that now."

Clay was as wroth as she had wished. He took out a little book. "Well, I'll give you a check for that amount—or more. And you can pay Duane off with interest. I won't have you owing him money."

"You won't have!" Daphne mocked. "You won't have? Since when did you become senior partner here?"

"Senior partner?" Clay railed. "I'm no partner in this business! I hate this business. It makes me sick to see you in it."

"Then step out on the walk," said Daphne. "You're scaring away customers and using up the time of the firm. The boudoir is no place for you, anyway."

A young woman with a bridal eye walked in and Daphne left Clay to blunder out sheepishly. He did not see that she cast sheep's eyes after him. He was a most bewildered young man. He had made a pile of money and still he was not happy!

CHAPTER XXVII.

In the course of a few wretched days Clay picked up some of the facts about Daphne's presence in Wetherell's fatal car. He was more furious at her than ever and more incapable of hating her.

He saw Bayard often, but Bayard knew little and said less. One afternoon he invited Clay to ride with him to the hospital, whence Lella was to graduate. He warned Clay not to betray how shocked he would be at Lella's appearance, which, he said, was a wonderful improvement on what it had been.

She was, indeed, a mere shell, and Clay was not entirely successful with his compliments.

Lella sighed: "Much obliged for your good intentions. I'm a mere sack of bones, but I'm going to get well. The doctors say that if I take care of myself every minute and go to a lot of specialists and go to Bar Harbor in the hot weather and to Palm Beach in the cold and spend about a million dollars I'll be myself some day. That's not much, but it's all I've got to work for. Poor Bydell! He didn't know he was endorsing a hospital when he married me."

"What do I care, honey?" Bayard cried, with perfect chivalry. "The money is rolling in and I'd rather spend it on you than on anybody else."

"The money's rolling out just as fast as it rolls in," Lella sighed. "The Lord seems to provide a new expense for every streak of luck. And that's my middle name—Expense."

She had actually learned one lesson. That was a hopeful sign.

Clay sought Daphne in her odious (to him) place of business. She asked him what she could sell him. He said he would wait till the shop closed. She raised her eyebrows inapudently and gave him a chair in a corner. He sat there feeling as out of place as a strange man in a harem.

Eventually the last garrulous customer talked herself dumb; the last sewing woman went. Mrs. Chivvis pulled down the curtains in the show window and at the door and bade good night.

Then Daphne locked the door, dropped wearily into a chair, and sighed, "Well, Clay?"

"I want to know why you don't give up Tom Duane."

She shrugged her excellent shoulders again, but she did not smile. She spoke instead: "I don't ask you to give up your stenographer."

"Oh, it's like that, eh? Well, then, why won't you let me lend you money instead of Tom Duane?"

Her answer astounded him with its feminine logic: "I can borrow of Mr. Duane because I don't love him and never did and he knows it. I can't borrow of you because—"

He leaped at the implication: "Because you love me?"

"Because I used to."

"Don't you any more?" he groaned.

"How can I tell? It's been months and months since I saw the Clay Wimburn that came out to Cleveland and lured me on to New York. The only Clay Wimburn I've seen for some time has been a horribly prosperous, domineering snob who is too proud to be seen with a working woman. He wants to marry a lady. I never was one and don't want to be one. I'm a business woman and I love it."

"And you wouldn't give up your shop for me?"

"Certainly not."

He looked at her with baffled emotions. She was so delectable and so obstinate, so right-hearted and so wrong-headed. It was intolerable that she should keep a shop. He spoke after a long delay:

"May I come and see you once in a while?"

"If you want to."

"Where you living now?"

"Still at the Chivvises."

"You ought to take better care of yourself than that. Surely you can afford a better home."

"I suppose so, but it would be lonely anywhere else. It has been safe there—since you quit calling on me. It doesn't cost me much."

"But you're making so much money."

"Not so very much—yet, but it's all my own and I made every cent of it, and—golly! how I love to watch it grow."

"You miser."

"Maybe. I guess that's the only way to save money—to make a passion out of it and get a kind of voluptuous feeling from it. But I really think that it's the fun of making it that interests me most. It certainly keeps me out of mischief and out of loneliness. Oh, there's no freedom like having a job and a little reserve in the bank. It's the only life, Clay."

"And you wouldn't give up your 'freedom,' as you call it, even for a man you loved? Couldn't you love a man enough to do that?"

"I could love a man too much to do that. For where's the love in a woman's sitting around the house all day and waiting for a man to come home and listen to the gossip of her empty brain? That isn't loving, that's loafing."

Clay was not at all persuaded. "But there's no comfort or home life in marrying a business woman."

"How do you know? You know plenty of unsuccessful wives who are not business women."

"I want a housekeeper, not a shop-keeper."

"Go get one, then, I say. If a woman can't earn enough outside to hire a housekeeper let her do her own housework. But if she can earn enough to hire a hundred housekeepers why should she stick to the kitchen? In my home, if I ever get one, the cook will not be the star. Besides, it enlarges life so. Instead of two living on the wages of one two will live on the earnings of two. It seems to me it couldn't help being a better and a happier way of living."

"It Seems to Me It Couldn't Help Being a Better and a Happier Way of Living."

Clay blushed vigorously as he mumbled "What's your business woman going to do when the babies come? Or do you cut out the kiddies?"

Daphne blushed, too. "Well, I should think that the business woman could afford babies better than anybody else. She has to give up the housework, anyway, even when she's a housekeeper. I suppose she could give up her shop for a while. At least she could share the expense—or her husband could stand the bills since he escapes the pain. I tell you, if I ever had a daughter I'd make her learn her own trade if she never learned anything else. I'd never raise her to the hideous, indecent belief that the world owes her a living and she's got a right to squeeze it out of the heart's blood of some hard-working man. No, sirree! It may be old-fashioned, but it isn't decent, and it isn't even romantic. The love of two free souls, with their own careers and their own expenses, seems to me about the best kind of love there could be. Then both of them can come home evenings and their home will be a home—a fresh, sweet meeting place."

Clay breathed hard. He was silenced, but not convinced—beyond being convinced that Daphne Kip was still the one woman in the world for him, in spite of her cantankerous notions. Still, of course, a woman had to have some flaw or she would not be human. Daphne's foible was as harmless as anyone's, perhaps. So he blurted out:

"I suppose you've given up all thought of marrying me?"

She answered him with pious earnestness: "I've never given up that thought, Clay. I've been trying to make myself worthy of the happiness it would mean. I have had the trousseau all made, and paid for, a long while. That's what I came to town for originally—our trousseau. But when I saw how much sacrifice it meant for my poor old father and what a bundle of bills I'd be dumping on my poor young lover I couldn't see the good of it. So I took my vow that I wouldn't get a trousseau till I could earn the price of it myself. And now I've earned the price and I've got it. But I've lost my excuse for wearing it."

"Still, I'd probably have lost you, anyway, or ruined you if I had brought you my old ideas. Everybody always says that money is the enemy of love. I wonder if it couldn't be made the friend. It would be an interesting experiment, anyway."

"Daphne, honey, let's try the experiment."

She looked at him with a heavenly smile in her eyes, and answered, "Let's."

He moved, toward her, but she dodged behind the counter. She studied him a moment, then reached below the counter. A bell rang and a drawer slid out. She took some bills from it, made a memorandum on a slip of paper, and put that in the place of the bills, closed the drawer, and leaned across the counter, murmuring:

"They say all successful businesses are begun on borrowed money. So I'll borrow this from the firm—for luck."

She put out her hand. Clay put out his. She laid three dollars on his palm and closed his fingers on them.

"What's all this?" he asked, all mystified. She explained:

"A plain gold band costs about six dollars, and that's for my half of the partnership. Women are wearing their wedding rings very light nowadays."

"I should say so!" Clay groaned, but with a smile.

She bent forward and he bent forward and their lips met. She was only a saleswoman selling a customer part of a heart for part of a heart, but to Clay the very counter was the golden bar of heaven, and Daphne the Blessed Damozel that leaned on it and made it warm.

THE END.

The Hottest City.

The city of Hyderabad, on the great Sind desert of India, has the reputation of being the hottest place in the world, having a shade temperature of 127 degrees during the summer months! Even the natives find it hot—and that is saying something.

In order to cool their houses as much as possible, the people make use of curious ventilators very much like those on shipboard, "setting" them so as to convey a breeze to the dwellers in the hot rooms below. Every residential building has several of these queer airshafts leading down to the principal living rooms, and especially to the bedrooms. Even so, it is practically impossible, during the terrible heat of summer, to get to sleep until two or three o'clock in the morning, and then one only gets a couple of hours' rest, as the rays of the Indian sun are especially strong early in the morning, and soon raise the temperature again to an unbearable extent.

Rush for Free Molasses.

When a tank car filled with 8,000 gallons of molasses was upset near Telford, Pa., and the molasses began to run out, people came by scores, on foot, in carriages and by automobiles, and salvaged some hundreds of gallons of molasses before the railroad men plugged the opening and left dozens of disappointed ones waiting to get at the outflow.

and followed along a road leading to the pond about 250 yards away. They saw the cat on the shore, and when they went to catch the animal it jumped into the water. Blanche, who is an expert swimmer, plunged in after the cat and succeeded in reaching it.

While Blanche was swimming back to the shore, Alice became hysterical, and waded in to help her sister. She could not swim, and before Blanche could reach her she disappeared beneath the surface.

She made for the shore and ran to the house for help. Dennis Sullivan and Archibald Woodard responded. Getting the location of where Miss Dowling went down, Woodard plunged into the water. After several attempts in diving he found the body. Dr. Finn was called and sent for the police pulmotor, but was unable to revive the young woman.

Judge's Nap Leads to Bomb Scare in Court

San Francisco.—The sun showered Judge Graham's courtroom with a warm and mellow light, and no one could blame the Judge, Roy Gallagher, his reporter, nor William H. McNulty, his clerk, if they all dozed a little while opposing counsel argued over the domestic troubles of V. de Arrillaga. But when the judge's feet slipped and the wooden rest where they also had been dozing struck a rousing blow against the hollow front of his desk everybody awakened with a snap and with blanched lips whispered the sinister words: "Bombs." There was no more dozing.

WHEN GREEK MEETS GREEK

Yank Captures Alleged Soldier After Latter Has Attempted to Rob Bank.

White Bear, Minn.—Henry Clewett, White Bear, who returned to Minnesota on Thursday with the famous One Hundred and Fifty-first Minnesota field artillery of the Rainbow division and came here to visit his parents, "stormed" a bandit, who had fled into an alley, after robbing the First State bank of White Bear of more than $4,000.

C. H. White, who says he is a returned soldier, is in the county jail. Shortly after noon, White entered the bank, W. J. Kidder, cashier, was alone. White collected all available currency and forced Kidder into the vault. The cashier touched off the burglar alarm, whereupon a gong above the bank door, started clanging when White, carrying his booty, stepped outside.

White started away in his automobile, but when a shot whizzed by him he threw away his haul and fled from the machine.

Clewett was visiting his uncle, Nels Nelson, who is White Bear's police force, when he learned of the robbery. He joined the posse, which cornered White in an alley. Into the alley went Clewett.

"Give up your guns," he ordered. White produced his two weapons and a revolver he had taken from Cashier Kidder.

"I've been over the top too many times to be worried by a bird like that," said Clewett.

THE MAKING OF A FAMOUS MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attend the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used annually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

General Pershing's War Map.

In installing General Pershing's war map in the old National Museum building in Washington, the commander's room at the front just as it looked when the map was in actual use, is being reproduced as a setting. Here will be the chairs used by the general and his aids while they studied the map, which changed hourly, night and day, as reports came in and were recorded. The table at which the officers looked over documents will stand as it used to at one side, and the walls will be covered with the identical lineoleum that was a background for the map. The map was brought over in pieces now joined together, and the conventional design of the lineoleum is said to give an odd kitchenlike domesticity to the room in which General Pershing watched history writing itself in a very literal sense on the wall.

Authors' Handwriting.

If readers and admirers of the polished sentences of popular authors could see the original manuscripts from which their works are printed they would be given interesting sidelights on the character and personality of the writers. The handwriting of G. K. Chesterton has been described by an English editor as "shocking." W. W. Jacobs, comedy writer of the sea, has all his literary work typed and makes but few corrections on the finished manuscript. Other English writers whose copy is reputed to be neat and quite acceptable to a printer are H. G. Wells, Rudyard Kipling, Arnold Bennett and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Editors say they never know what to expect from that imaginative genius, H. de Vere Stacpoole. Sometimes his work is neatly typed on good paper, but often it is scribbled on sheets torn from a copybook.

HEARD and SEEN at the CAPITAL

Says He'll Move National Capital to St. Louis

WASHINGTON.—Senator Sherman of Illinois threatened the other day to have the capital of the United States removed from Washington to the middle West. The senator is still on the warpath against profiteering landlords of the District of Columbia and says if they persist in gouging the public after war-time legislation restraining them becomes inoperative, he will "up and move" the capital westward to grow up with the country. Washington never was a good place for it, anyway, he insists.

But the Illinois senator does not even have his own state or its metropolis in mind. He suggests St. Louis as the probable place he will pick for the future capital of the nation.

"I have been giving the matter of landlord extortion consideration," said Senator Sherman. "After peace has been proclaimed, I do not see how a law can be passed which will limit a landlord in the amount of rent he may charge any more than it would be possible to pass a law saying how much a man may charge for wheat or any other commodity."

"It has been reported to me that there will be a general and heavy increase in rents by the landlords. If that happens, I shall immediately introduce a measure transferring the capital of the nation to some other place, possibly St. Louis."

"I do not think that many persons here realize the extent of the feeling which has been aroused among the members of congress by the exorbitant charges for rent and food and clothing they have been compelled to pay in Washington. A bill of the kind I have mentioned will have strong support."

From a military point of view, Washington is about the poorest place that could be selected for a capital of the nation, he says.

Nor is it centrally located so far as the interests of the country are concerned.

Dangers of the Uncharted Seas Move Uncle Sam

AMERICA is just now embarking upon a great career as a maritime nation. It is spending billions for ships and bidding for men to enter the merchant marine. One of the first duties of every maritime nation is to furnish mariners with such data as will enable them to navigate the waters under its jurisdiction with the greatest possible safety. The obligation has not been discharged by the United States. Many lives and property worth millions of dollars are lost annually because the task of charting the coastal waters of the United States and its possessions has never been completed.

Now that the war is over, the finishing of this job is one of the most pressing necessities which the nation faces. Just before we entered the war the coast and geodetic survey celebrated its one hundredth anniversary and went through some other motions designed to attract the public attention to itself and to the need for an extension of its work. But with the declaration of war against Germany all this came to an end. Five out of the dozen or so small boats which the survey possesses were taken over by the navy for use as patrols, and more than half of the officers and men went with them, while those who remained were busy making special maps and surveys for the army and navy.

Now that the war is over the coast and geodetic survey is going back to its proper work with energy. Its largest and best boat, the Survey, is now on her way to Alaska via the Panama canal, and others are being repaired and refitted for work on the Pacific coast.

Adoption of a National Highways Policy Likely

"THE adoption of a national highways policy by the United States Chamber of Commerce at its annual convention, coupled with recent announcements by Senator Penrose, the next chairman of the senate finance committee, and Senator Bankhead, retiring chairman of the senate committee on post offices and post roads, that they stand for national highways tremendously strengthened and probability of passage of the Townsend bill at the extra session of congress," says David Jameson, president of the American Automobile association.

"A national highway system can be kept within 3 per cent of the total mileage of highways in the United States and still serve our fundamental needs. To make this point clear it may safely be stated that a zone, ten miles in width and 75,000 miles in length, will reach more than 85 per cent of the population of the United States, more than 85 per cent of the taxable real estate and more than 65 per cent of the tonnage of farm products."

"Such a system would protect with a military highway having an aggregate length of about 10,800 miles our Atlantic, Gulf, Mexican, Pacific and Canadian borders; would give access to our national forests, our national parks and open up much of the public domain not now easily accessible, and would afford trunk-line routes for parcel post in the territories where this form of transportation is most intensive in character."

He also says that if as a condition to the building of the national highways in each state a construction of an equivalent mileage of state highways should be required, this would add 75,000 miles of state highways.

This, with the national system, would aggregate 150,000 miles

Do You Know Meter and Liter? Better Brush Up

IF YOU do not understand the metric system of measurement, look it up and learn it. For there are strong indications that the meter and the liter will soon displace the yard and the quart in all your dealings. A movement backed by scientific and business organizations in all parts of the country has been started to accomplish this change. And the meter propagandists have made a strong case. The chief reasons why we should abandon our system for the metric system are that the latter is much simpler and easier to learn, that it is more accurate, and, above all, that it is now the compulsory system in every civilized country in the world except the United States and Great Britain. That is the big fact. In all of our dealings with foreign peoples and governments we are handicapped because we do not use the same system of measurements. American scientists were compelled long since to adopt the metric system, with the result that many of their publications are incomprehensible. Now the war has convinced thousands of persons of the necessity for using the universal language of measurement in this country, with the result that the meter has many new and influential backers.

"This country has lagged behind the rest of the world by neglecting to adopt a system of quantity expression so simple that the average child of ten can learn its essential features in ten minutes," is the way H. D. Hubbard, one of the experts on weights and measures at the bureau of standards, puts it.

He also says that our failure to cast aside a clumsy medieval system for one that is modern and practical has greatly handicapped us in business abroad and at home.

Officials of the United States bureau of standards feel certain that this country will ultimately use the metric system.

"Finer'n frog hair, Jurd!" triumphantly replied Gap Johnson. "Of course, my wife has been sorter puny, yur of late, and several of the children have got the measles and mumps and one thing and another, and the lightning struck the corner of the house tuther night and like to have tore the whole place to pieces, and one of the kids fell out of a tree and broke his arm, and a feller took a shot at me day before yesterday and ventilated my ear, and such as that, but I swapped for a running horse last week, and a couple of my hounds have got six pups apiece. KNEW THAT WOULD STOP HIM

Lawyer Evidently Was Well Acquainted With the Weakness of His Long-Winded Friend.

C. H. Murphy relates the story of a Philadelphia lawyer, retired, who, in the days of his active practice, was notorious for his long-windedness.

On one occasion he had been spouting forth his concluding argument for six hours, and the end was nowhere in sight, when the opposing attorney beckoned his associate and whispered: "Can't you stop him, Jack?"

"I'll stop him in two minutes," Jack replied confidently. And he wrote and passed to the orator the following note:

"My Dear Colonel—As soon as you finish your magnificent argument I would like you to join me at the hotel in a bumper of rare old Bourbon."

The lawyer halted in the midst of an impassioned period, put on his glasses, and read the note that had been handed him, then he removed his glasses again and, taking up his hat and bag, he said:

"And now, may I please the court and gentlemen of the jury, I leave the case with you."

A minute later he was proceeding in stately fashion in the direction of the hotel bar.

Defied the Robbers Menacing Pistols.

robberies go. They are searching for former visitors at the apartment as possible suspects.

For the robbers, undoubtedly had advance information on Mrs. Harvey's jewels. There was one item of an $1,800 diamond ring. She slipped this down the front of her house-gown when she heard the men at the front door order her maid, Bessie Jensen, to hold up her hands. They had rung the doorbell.

Yet, though the ring was invisible, the robbers immediately demanded that she produce it. And when she protested ignorance of such a ring she was ordered to disrobe.

Three Are Electrocuted by Clothesline Contact

Honolulu, Hawaii.—Mrs. James S. Nott, her six-year-old baby boy and a Chinese servant were electrocuted while hanging out clothes in the rear yard of her home in Honolulu.

An electric light extension, leading from a back porch to a fernery, had been strung across the galvanized wire clothes line. In some manner the insulation became broken and the clothes-line was charged with electricity.

The Chinese servant was the first to die. Mrs. Nott, in going to his aid, was electrocuted. It is believed that the little boy attempted to help his mother and in so doing was killed.

TOT WALKS IN HER SLEEP

Four-Year-Old Girl Unlocks Door and Tramps Four Blocks to Grandmother's.

Rock Springs, Wyo.—Arising from her bed at 3:30 a. m., while sleeping soundly, four-year-old Lucille Davis unlocked a door, left the home of her parents, walked four blocks to her grandmother, broke a window pane with her fists, unlatched the window fastening, hoisted the sash, crawled through the window, climbed the stairs to the second floor of the house and was discovered—still sound asleep—standing against a wall that barred her further progress.

Her presence was betrayed by the barking of a watchdog, the noise made by her entrance not having aroused her grandmother's family.

Aside from a few cuts in her hand, the child is not suffering as a result of her remarkable performance, which is thought to be one of the strangest cases of somnambulism ever recorded.

Criminal With Long Record Declares Life of Crime Does Not Pay.

Omaha, Neb.—"Stretch" Bird, arrested in Omaha charged with implication in the robbery of a garage and theft of a dozen high-priced automobile tires, has had an eventful criminal career. He is forty years old and has spent more than one-half of his life in prison. "And it was worse than wasted," Bird said, "for all of the robberies I have committed yielded me less than $100 in money. It doesn't pay to do wrong."

To Fill Floor Cracks.

A very complete filling for open cracks in floors may be made by thoroughly soaking old newspapers in a paste made of one pound of flour to three quarts of water, or a less quantity in those proportions. Put one tablespoonful of alum in the mixture and stir thoroughly until brought to a boiling heat. Make the final mixture about as thick as putty and apply with a putty knife. It will harden like papier mache.

Protect the Milk Snake.

The milk snake, instead of stealing the farmer's milk, makes constant war upon rats who annually cost the country millions of dollars in the destruction of cereals. They like to live under barns and porches, and can follow through a rat hole where a ferret couldn't go, and eat the young rats. They eat meadow mice and field mice also.

Injustice of Pact in Its Present
Form Is Cited in Docu-

DECLARES ARMISTICE AGREEMENT VIOLATED

Foe Uses 60,000 Words to Reply to Demands of the Victors—Says Germany's Importance Is Independent of Military Position.

Paris, June 10.—Germany's importance is independent of her temporary military and political position. If she is not admitted (to the League of Nations) immediately on the signing of peace it is impossible to speak of a League of Nations.

This is one of the points raised by Germany in her 60,000 word reply to the peace treaty, in which she makes a long series of counter-proposals. A summary of that reply was issued by the committee on public information
on the eve of the delivery to Count
von Brockdorff-Rantzau by the allies
of the amended pact.

On the whole the summary covers little new ground, the main points of the German arguments having been covered in press dispatches during the last few weeks. Beyond putting official stamp on those dispatches, the summary reveals, however, some interesting details. It shows, also, that the German reply was much stronger,
both in text and tenor of protests and counter-demands, than hitherto indicated.

Main Thread of Reply.

The main thread of the German answer is the charge that the original peace treaty constitutes a breach of the solemn armistice agreement, based on the Wilsonian 14 points. It says the treaty would mean "the complete enslavement of the German people and the betrayal of all the world's cherished hopes of peace." The right of self-determination, the Germans assert,
has been "willfully violated throughout."

It is difficult to see, Germany avers,
how and harsher terms could have been dictated to the former imperialistic and irresponsible government. Many speeches of allied statesmen and of President Wilson are then quoted as saying the war was against that government, not against the German people. In the words of the summary:

"Today, however, the allied powers
are racing not a irresponsible German government but the German people ruling its own future for itself.
This has been utterly disregarded in the draft treaty."

The treaty is described as "merely a celebration of the last triumph of imperialist and capitalist tendencies."

Won't Barter Human Beings.
In another passage the reply says
Germany "cannot consent to the bartering of human beings," and later:

"The German government declines to make any reparation in the form of punishment, and still more emphatically declines to pass on to individual
parts of the population the punishment
intended for the whole of the community."

Annexation of the Saar district is called the creation of another Alsace-Lorraine. As for those provinces, Germany claims their cession without consulting the population would be a new wrong. She admits that, "according to present conceptions of right, an injustice was committed in 1871, when the people were not consulted."

Acceptance of the trial of the ex-
kaiser as a denunciation of his extradition
from Holland are flatly refused on the ground that "no German subject can be brought before a foreign court without established law or legal basis."

Nor will she consent to the extradition of other subjects accused of war
crimes, but instead proposes an international court of neutrals "to judge
the fact of crime." The punishment, however, she claims, must remain with the national courts.

The document bitterly assails the abolition of all German rights outside Europe as "irreconcilable with the preliminary negotiations and as wholly impossible to a great people who not only have supreme needs for markets
and supplies but who have shown themselves capable of sharing the world's task of civilization."

A summary of the German protests
and counter-proposals as computed
from today's official resume, follows:

Reparation.

Germany accepts responsibility only for civilian losses in the Belgian and French areas occupied by her in the war. She agrees to pay not more than $25,000,000, provided her other counter-proposals are accepted. Characterizing the allied plan for a reparations commission as infringing on German sovereignty, she proposes a "cooperative German commission" to work alongside the allied body.

Germany accepts the obligation to pay for all damages sustained by the civil populations in the occupied parts of Belgium and France, inasmuch as she brought upon them the terrors of war by a breach of international law
through the violation of neutrality.

The Germans refuse, however, to pay reparation to other occupied territories in Italy, Montenegro, Serbia, Rumania and Poland, on the ground
that "no attack in contradiction to international law was involved."

She refuses to pay the costs of the allied-American armies of occupation,
considering this "both unnecessary
and uneconomic."

She declares the Poles have not so far shown themselves trustworthy protectors of the national and religious rights of minorities, and asks a commission to assess damages caused by recent Polish disturbances in German-inhabited regions.

Occupation.
She demands, in words of bitter protest, that all allied troops be withdrawn within six months of the signing
of peace.

Negotiations.
She insists she has a right to oral
discussion of the practical application of the principles upon the acceptance
of which by her and her enemies she laid down her arms.

Saar.
"Purely German territory," she claims important industrial districts
beyond the coal mines are demanded
from her, but "even the cession of the mining district could not be admitted."

She is willing to guarantee a supply of coal, "but the total coal computed to exist in the Saar mines would represent a hundred times the maximum France demands." Except for 93 years under French rule, the population has been attached to Germany for over a thousand years. Reconsideration of the whole question is demanded.

Schleswig.
She charges the demarcation for a plebiscite has been traced through purely German territory and goes further than Denmark herself wishes
to go.

Upper Silesia.
Cession "cannot be demanded at all." It is added that "Upper Silesia owes everything to Germany and Germany cannot dispense with Upper Silesia, while Poland does not really need it."

Germany is prepared to cede
such parts as are truly Polish. In all territories east and west, where cession is demanded, she says it must be preceded by a plebiscite with universal suffrage administered under fair conditions by a neutral power after evacuation of foreign troops.

West Prussia.
Germany is ready to cede to Poland
such west Prussian territories as are indisputably Polish.

East Prussia.
Germany cannot consent to the severance of East Prussia, with a German population of 1,500,000 from the German empire. A bridge must be absolutely prepared.

Danzig.
This purely German town must remain within the German empire. Germany refuses to make it a free city,
but is willing to make it and Koenigsberg free ports to give Poland access to the sea.

Alsace-Lorraine.
The population alone should decide whether it wants to belong to France
or Germany or wants to be an independent state. "If France is to take over the results of Germany's effort
she must equally take over a proportionate share in the German debt."

German-Austria.
Germany cannot pledge herself to oppose a possible desire of German Austria to be united with her.

Colonies.
The treaty clauses are called "unjust." Germany claims she has "a natural claim to colonies from her culture and undeniable colonial accomplishments."

Russia.
It conflicts with a peace of right
and justice to demand from Germany
to recognize beforehand any treaties which her present enemies may make with the states which were formerly part of the Russian empire.

"Germany," says the reply, "has expressly accepted President Wilson's 14 points, and nothing else." By eliminating Germany from the world's trade, it is asserted, her enemies
"might get rid of a troublesome competitor, but the world already improv-erished by the war would become infinitely poorer." She promises in her counter-proposals to set an example
in disarmament offering to give up all naval and military weapons to the minimum point required for police work in maintaining law and order
internally.

Trial of Ex-Kaiser.

"As to the trial of the ex-kaiser,
Germany cannot recognize the justification of such criminal prosecution,
which is not founded upon any legal basis, or agree to the competence of the special tribunal proposed."

PEACE TERMS ARE UPHELD IN FINAL REPLY TO ENEMY

Few Changes as Allies Stand
Pat on the Big Points.

GERMANS MUST SIGN TREATY BY MONDAY

Armies Are Ready to Move Eastward
If Acceptance Is Not Prompt—Justice Is Demanded for 7,000,000 Dead
Because of Prussian Brutality.

Paris, June 17.—The "big four's"
last word about peace terms was handed to the German delegation
shortly before seven o'clock Monday evening. Its delivery was delayed by a several hours' wrangle over one of the chief concessions—civilian control of the occupied Rhine districts. Again France's "Tiger" won his point after a long and fiery debate. The concession was stricken from the amended document.

Immediately upon receipt of the document Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, president of the German peace delegation, left by special train for Weimar. There he will submit them to President Ebert who, in turn, will lay them before his cabinet—of which Rantzau, as foreign minister, is a member—preparatory to reading them in the national assembly. That body, according to all recent news
from Germany, is to decide on the final "yes" or "no."

Clemenceau Lashes Germans.

With the revised treaty Paul Dats-
tau, secretary of the peace conference,
handed Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau a 4,500-word "covering" letter, written by Clemenceau. It is a bitter denunciation of Germany's bickering attitude, a stinging recapitulation of her war crimes, an explanation of the treaty modifications, and an ultimatum. It tells the Germans flatly that no further attempts at bargaining will be tolerated; that they must answer
"yes" or "no," and do so within five days.

This means that by six o'clock this coming Saturday evening she must notify the powers without any "ifs"
and "buts" and "howevers," whether
she will or will not sign.

After that notification she will have three additional days of grace in which to affix her signature to the treaty. If her answer Saturday is
"yes," the diplomatic and ceremonial machinery will be set in motion for the greatest green-table event in history, and the world will have peace
not later than a week from tomorrow.
If she says "no," five days hence, the peace-makers will lay aside their pens and tell Foch to go ahead. His sword is sharp and half unsheathed, ready for the "coup de grace." He would promptly inform the Germans by wireless that the armistice is off and the war will be on again beginning at six o'clock Tuesday night, June 24. The three fateful days between Saturday
and Tuesday are the last in which the Germans may choose between utter military-economic subjection and peace.

In Clemenceau's "take-it-or-leave-it"
letter he admits that the treaty is a hard one, but he adds that its hardness is fully justified by Germany's course in plunging the world into the abyss of war and by her methods during the conflict. He tells them practically in so many words that, having unleashed the world calamity, they must suffer for it.

The revised treaty of peace contains assurance of membership in the League of Nations "in the early future," provided Germany fulfills her obligations.

This is a considerable concession,
though it does not meet the German
demand for admittance to membership
immediately upon the signing of peace.

The new document meets the German demand for co-operation with a German reparations commission.

It also puts the powers on record as willing to receive suggestions for discharging the German reparational obligation.

This opens the way to oral discussions the Germans asked for—but not until peace is signed. It removes the grounds on which the Germans
charged infringement on their sovereignty and national pride, in the reparational transactions.

Another change in the treaty text provides for the plebiscite in upper Silesia for which the Germans had asked. It also guarantees coal from that province (presumably in the event that the plebiscite goes against Germany).

Drop Kiel Canal Question.

The original proposal of an international commission for the administration of the Kiel canal has been dropped.

ports of new fields invaded. In Macon

county farmers worked all day Sunday putting out a poison to stop the invasion and destruction, which threatens to become serious.

Labor Sufficient for Harvest.

Kansas City, Mo., June 17.—That the middle Western wheat crop will not,
from present indications, suffer for want of sufficient harvest labor was the declaration of A. L. Barkman, in charge of the federal employment service in this city.

dropped. The Germans had declared
they would accept such a commission
only if other straits were similarly treated (including manifestly to the Suez and Panama canals).

Among the modifications also are frontier rectifications in West Prussia.
The third zone of the Schleswig plebiscite is omitted in the new draft.
The Germans had charged that this zone went further than Denmark herself wished to go.

The Germans are allowed a temporary increase of their army from 100-000 to 200,000, which meets their plea
for a sufficient force to maintain law
and order in the transition period.

The revised document also contains a declaration of intention to submit within a month of the signature of peace a list of those accused of violations of the laws and customs of war.

The German reply had denied the allies right to extradite and try the ex-
kaiser or any other German citizens.
It declared Germany's willingness for an international neutral court to establish the fact of crime, the punishment to be left to the national courts.

Germany's claims regarding Danzig
are rejected. Danzig is made a free city. Its inhabitants will be autonomous and do not come under Polish rule. Clemenceau's covering letter explains that the city forms no part of the Polish state.

Poland, however, by the treaty, has been given "certain economic rights"
in Danzig.

The German reply said:

"Danzig, a purely German town,
must remain with the German empire,
to make it a free city and to surrender certain of its rights to Poland
would lead to violent opposition and a continuous state of war in the East."
The Germans, however, offered to make Danzig, as well as Koenigsberg,
free ports.

Covers Foe's Sins.

Like a judge who, before modifying
a sentence, wishes to impress upon the prisoner the full weight of his guilt and pound into his brain the fact that the leniency is really undeserved, Georges Clemenceau, premier of France, explains the revised treaty handed to Germany, lashes the vanquished empire with a bitter, stinging indictment, lest its former or present
masters, deeming clemency weakness,
rally once more for an attempt to turn
defeat into triumph.

History's most momentous peace
document, now revised beyond revision, is thus accompanied by the most aggressive, the most flaying diplomatic note on record. It is indeed a "covering" letter, for it covers all the sins
of the foe, all his dark deeds before and during the war, and all the reasons
why he has been condemned and must suffer for those sins. It is, at the same time, a sharp rebuke to the Teuton
peace parliamentaries for "utterly failing to understand the position in which Germany stands today."

This fact, the French premier explains, forces him to open his letter
with "a clear statement of the judgment of the world which has been formed by practically the whole civilized mankind." Then he enumerates, not under so many headings, but in smooth and eloquent sequence, the long series of crimes to which, he says,
the foe must turn if he seeks the reason for the stern justice of the peace.

Germany, he says, tried for years
before the war to dictate and tyrannize
over a subservient Europe.

She taught her subjects the doctrine
that might was right.

She armed feverishly by land and sea and spread the falsehood that her neighbors were jealous of her.

She developed a widespread system
of espionage and intrigue all over the world.

She kept Europe in a ferment by threats of violence.

She encouraged Austria to declare war on Serbia at 48 hours' notice, fully aware that the conflict would become general.

She conducted the war in a savage
and inhuman manner.

She violated Belgian neutrality and systematically terrorized that country's inhabitants.

She was the first to use poison gas.

She was the first to bomb and shell
defenseless towns.

She caused the deaths of 7,000,000
men, and injuries and sufferings to 20-000,000 others.

Lust for Tyranny.

She did all this—"to gratify her lust
for tyranny by resort to war," and her conduct "is almost unexampled in human history."

Then Clemenceau continues:

"The allied and associated powers believe that they would be false to those who have given their all to save the freedom of the world if they consent to treat war on any other basis than
as a crime against humanity and right."

He scoffs at the German delegates'
charge that their country was tricked
into laying down her arms by a series
of principles which was not lived up to.
The principles are lived up to fully and painstakingly, the French premier avers, and quotes from speeches
by himself, President Wilson and Premiers Lloyd George and Orlando.

Von Zeppelin's Career.

Count von Zeppelin, inventor of the airship which bears his name, was not killed in the war, but died of pneumonia at Charlottenburg, near Berlin, on March 8, 1917. He was born in 1838
and was a lieutenant of cavalry at the age of twenty-five, when, in April, 1863, he was sent to the United States
as Prussian military attaché of the Union army in the Civil war, being attached to the Army of the Mississippi,
in which Gen. Carl Schurz commanded a brigade. It was at that time that Count von Zeppelin had his first experience as an aeronaut, going up in a captured balloon belonging to the corps
to which he was attached.

Gesticulatory.

'Twas a cold winter's day, and Abe
and Ike had been walking together
for some considerable time, in the usual Jewish manner, with their hands
tucked in their sleeves, muffled fashion,
and neither had spoken a word the whole time.

Said Abe to Ike:
"Why don't you say something,
Ike?"

"Why me? You jolly well get your own hands cold," replied Ike.—Lon-

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists
who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why
so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. It is on sale
at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes,
medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr.
Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

"I was about down and out from kidney trouble," says Harry Griffith, of 228 N. Lexington St., Westchester, Pa.
"The kidney secretions burned like scalding water. Sometimes there would be a complete stoppage and, oh, what pain I suffered! My feet

"My back hurt right

couldn't bend over without terrible pain and I would fall to my knees and crawl along

up. Blinding dizziness came on and terrible headaches added to my misery."

"I was rapidly losing weight and knew something would have to be done. I began taking Doan's Kidney

The troubles were soon leaving me and six boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills

U. S. FIGHTING MEN WANTED A CHURCH

REPORT OF Y. M. C. A. IN CENTRAL MILITARY DEPARTMENT CONTAINS INTERESTING INFORMATION.

Chicago.—Uncle Sam's soldiers and sailors go to church. Figures showing attendance at religious services in Y. M. C. A. huts in military camps of the central department prove it.

Attendance at the religious meetings and Bible classes held in the huts between May 1, 1917, and December 31, 1918, was more than 5,280,000.

A. H. Lichty, executive secretary of the central department of the national war-work council of the Y. M. C. A., has issued a report covering statistics of the Y. M. C. A. activities in the 131 huts in Central department camps. Mr. Lichty is in command of nearly 1,000 workers. Before coming to Chicago for war work he was secretary of the Ohio State Y. M. C. A. During his administration more than 2,500 men and women have been recruited in the 14 Central states for overseas service with the Y. M. C. A.

The number of letters written in huts in the 33 military camps totaled 62,708,410. The total attendance was 60,603,800.

Movies were the most popular feature of the "Y" service in the camps. The attendance at the 12,496 motion picture shows was 5,970,303, an average of more than 400.

The "Y" educational features were popular. In the 20 months 7,570 lectures were heard by 2,202,810 soldiers and sailors. The 68,272 classes of various kinds drew 1,304,418 and the 982 science and art clubs 62,530. For the American Library association the "Y" passed out 1,423,068 books.

Athletics Popular. The number of participants in athletic contests under the direction of the "Y" was greater than the number of spectators. There were 5,308,250 in the contests and 4,437,017 "looking on."

The 902 workers in the 131 huts in the army and navy camps and the 184 S. A. T. units passed out to America's fighting men 510,432 Scriptures. There were 282,220 personal interviews on the subject of religion; 52,754 decisions to accept the Christian faith and 117,770 signed the "war roll" pledging themselves to a Christian life.

The 17,361 entertainments not including movies, drew 9,731,046 soldiers and sailors.

The fighting men were thrifty. In the period covered by the report the "Y" sent home for the enlisted men $3,996,025 in money orders.

"Y" to Open Clubs for Troops. At the request of the French minister of marines the Y. M. C. A. is planning the establishment of clubs for American and French troops in Toulon and in the suburbs of that city.

Y. M. C. A. NO LONGER TO MAINTAIN ARMY POST EXCHANGES.

Paris.—The American Y. M. C. A., at its own request, has been relieved of its work of maintaining the post exchanges with the American army. Correspondence exchanged between General Pershing and E. C. Carter, in charge of Y. M. C. A. with the army, shows the reason for this arrangement was that the Y. M. C. A. now has "increased responsibilities in promoting educational, athletic and entertainment activities in the American expeditionary forces," thus placing a rapidly increasing burden on its personnel.

General Pershing in a letter to Mr. Carter approving the change, expressed his thanks "for the very valuable services and assistance which the Y. M. C. A. has rendered to the American expeditionary force in handling these exchanges. General Pershing added: "Handicapped by the shortage of tonnage and land transportation, the Y. M. C. A. has by extra exertion served the army better than could have been expected, and you may be assured that its aid has been a large factor in the final great accomplishments of the American army."

To prove that his soul is above worldly troubles and physical pain, this Hindu fakir nonchalantly reclines on a bed of spikes, much to the amazement of less spiritual observers. The bed of spikes will be one of the interesting exhibits shown at the Methodist Centenary Celebration, in Columbus, O., June 20 to July 13. Whether a fakir, Hindu or otherwise, can be found to demonstrate his power of endurance on it is still an unsettled question with celebration officials.

To Play Great Organ at the Methodist Centenary

MRS. MONTGOMERY LYNCH of Seattle will play the great $50,000 organ in the presentation of "The Wayfarer," the magnificent pageant of the Methodist Centenary Celebration, in Columbus, O., June 20 to July 13. Montgomery Lynch, her husband, will direct the chorus of 1,000 voices, which is a part of the pageant.

REDUCED FARE ADDS INTEREST

Visitors to Methodist Centenary to Be Well Cared For.

REGISTRATIONS ON INCREASE

Housing Committee of the Celebration Have More Than Forty Thousand Rooms in Private Homes at Their Disposal, Where These Who Attend Can Be Lodged as Conveniently as at a Hotel.

Announcement by the government that a special low rate of one and a third fares for the round trip has been authorized for the celebration, Columbus, O., June 20 to July 13, has tremendously increased the interest in that event and advanced manifold the inquiries and registrations coming from all parts of the United States. At headquarters the other day a single mail brought cash registrations from 14 separate states and South America.

The low rate has increased work for the special committees, which are responsible for housing the large influx of visitors now seen to be certain. Accommodations fall into three classes:

First, the hotels, which have an average daily capacity of 5,000 visitors. The second field of accommodation will be in public buildings, which have been specially fitted up for this sort of service for the celebration. These include the State School for the Blind, the State School for the Deaf, the large barracks which were provided at Ohio State university for the student army training corps, and other buildings of a similar nature held in reserve should the through exceed even present generous expectations.

The third line of convenience for the hospitality of Columbus is in the homes of the citizens themselves. More than 40,000 rooms have been listed with the housing committee, and these are card indexed by location, telephone number and best means of access. Visitors to the celebration can be lodged as conveniently as a clerk at a hotel assigns a visitor to his room. In order that there might be no misunderstanding, the committee in charge has a uniform rate for accommodations in private dwellings. The charge will be

$1 per day for a single person in a room and $1.50 per day for two persons in a room.

Always generously provided with restaurants, Columbus at the present time is having its number largely reinforced by reason of many places being turned into restaurants which were occupied as cafes before May 24, when the state became dry. In addition to these extraordinary facilities for feeding large numbers quickly are being installed in the exposition grounds.

MONSTER SCREEN AT METHODIST CENTENARY

Special Lantern Devised For Throwing Pictures.

Finishing details are being placed on the arrangements for the erection of the largest screen for the projection of pictures ever built in the world. This is to be one of the features of the Methodist Centenary Celebration, to be held in Columbus, June 20 to July 13.

This monster screen will have a surface for pictures 115x115 feet. The actual structure will be several feet larger in each direction. A special lantern has been successfully devised for throwing these tremendous pictures the necessary distance. The screen will be 250 feet from the nearest spectator and will be built to withstand 40 pounds pressure to the square foot. The lantern which will project these pictures has already successfully thrown pictures on a screen in New York City across a distance of four and a half city blocks. According to Architect Harry G. Holbrook, the screen will be, in effect, three sides of a house. It is necessary to give it the foundations equivalent to a four-story building. In order that there may be as much salvage as possible after the screen has served its purpose, the picture face will be of fitted lumber, which later will be treated with a white surface preparation.

The estimated cost of this screen will be $6,000. The screen and the lantern will be used in showing the tons of thousands of views, made all over the world by the Methodist Missionary Survey, which has the finest collection of pictorial review anywhere in the world.

Columbia Professor in Charge of Exhibits at Methodist Centenary

PROFESSOR LA MONT A. WARNER of Columbia university is director of fine arts and designer of exhibits and scenery for the Methodist Centenary Celebration, in Columbus, O., June 20 to July 13. On plans which he laid down, the multitude of exhibits, domestic and foreign, have been arranged in the buildings in scenic effects, making them at once appropriate and effective.

Professor Warner had charge of world exhibits held in Boston, Chicago, Baltimore and Providence in past years, and has studied and worked abroad.
